Julia represents clients in a variety of complex civil matters. She has experience in multiple stages of litigation, including counseling clients on potential suits, drafting dispositive motions and appellate briefs, compiling and analyzing data in mass tort suits, and managing and responding to discovery requests.

Julia is also committed to community service, including by performing pro bono work for incarcerated clients, serving as an election judge, and volunteering at nature sanctuaries in Chicago.

Prior to joining Goldman Ismail, Julia practiced at another leading national law firm and clerked on the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. Before attending law school, Julia worked at a startup in St. Louis, Missouri.
